

I think it would be unjust if you let the National Association of Broadcasters dictate what the public should be able to listen to on the airwaves. Satellite radio is by far the best thing to happen, with the public, since the invention of the light bulb. I think all of the other broadcasters are jealous and also are worried about the success of XM radio. We need to let the public have their choice of what they want to listen to and watch.....

Thanks,

Alan Clifton